The Development of Musical Style

- The musical styles in Europe were long dominated by the Holy Roman Empire and then Italy in the Medieval and Renaissance Period. The Baroque and Classical styles were led by the Austro-German composers. Along side were the French dances and the Italian operas.
- The Romantic Period saw the rise of national styles due to the regrouping and the establishment of the various countries.

The various states in Europe

- The Unification of Germany from Prussia into the German Empire 1871
- The Unification of Italy, 1848-1871
- 18th century Polish-Lithuanian Commonwealth
- The Austrian Empire to the Austro-Hungarian Empire
- The Kingdom of Bavaria
- The Kingdom of the Netherlands
- Grand Duchy大公国of Luxembourg, Grand Duchy of Alsace,
- Duchy公国of Warsaw, Duchy of Saxony, Duchy of Burgundy,

The Rise of Nationalism in Music

- Early signs of Nationalism: The use of folk songs and idioms, e.g. Germany: Schubert, Brahms;
- Poland: Chopin;
- Hungarian (Bohemian, Gypsy): Liszt.
- The new Nationalism in the middle of the Romantic Period came from the Russians who started to use Russian folklore in opera in addition to Russian folk songs. Other countries followed suit.
- Czech : Smetana (1824-84) and Antonín Dvořák (1841-1904);
- Norway : Edvard Grieg (1843-1907);
- USA : Stephen Foster (1820-94);
- Finland : Jean Sibelius (1865-1957);
- England : Edward Elgar (1857-1934), Ralph Vaughan Williams (1872-1958);
  Spain: Issac Albeniz(1860-1909), Manuel de Falla(1876-1946)
