GFH1000
Dr Julie Chiu

Citing from the Classics : Guidelines & Examples

When writing an academic essay, whether it is an entry in your reflective journal or the final term paper, you may want to clarify or support your argument with quotations from the original text. You can do so by using direct or indirect quotations. To make a direct quotation, you use a phrase or sentence exactly as it appears in the original text, enclosing it in quotation marks. If the direct quotation runs for more than three lines, you may set it off as an indented paragraph. To make an indirect quotation, you present the phrase(s) or sentence(s) in your own words in the form of a paraphrase or a summary. Whether you are making a direct or indirect quotation, you must indicate clearly that you are borrowing someone else's idea, not offering your own. You must also state your source clearly by doing two things. First, immediately following the quotation, you should insert a parenthetical note giving (1) the name of the author of the book from which you are quoting (or the name of the book if the author is unknown) and (2) the page number of the book in which you find the original text. For example,

> The Social Contract opens with an intriguing statement: "Man is born free; and everywhere he is in chains" (Rousseau 384). What kind of "chains" does the author mean? What "chains" do we face today and how do we break free from them? This is what we aim to examine in this essay.

Second, at the end of the essay, you should include a list of "Work(s) Cited" and provide full information of the publication from which you find the quotation. You should list the author's name, the book title, (the translator's name), the city of publication, the name of publisher, and the year of publication, as below:

Work Cited
Jean-Jacques Rousseau. The Social Contract. Tr. G.D.H. Cole. Miami: BN Publishing, 2007.

If it is through the textbook that you find access to The Social Contract, your "Work Cited" should read like this (remember to say which edition of the textbook you are using, as the pagination differs between the two editions):

Work Cited
Jean-Jacques Rousseau. The Social Contract. Tr. G.D.H. Cole. Miami: BN Publishing, 2007. In In Dialogue with Humanity: Textbook for General Education Foundation Programme. 2nd ed. Hong Kong: Office of University General Education, The Chinese University of Hong Kong, 2012. 383-421.

If there are two or more items in your listing, present them in alphabetical order of the authors' surnames, as follows:

Works Cited

Cook, Michael. The Koran: A Very Short Introduction. Oxford UP, 2000.

Huang Zongxi. Waiting for the Dawn: A Plan for the Prince. Tr. Theodore de Bary. New York: Columbia UP, 1993.

Rousseau, Jean-Jacques. The Social Contract. Tr. G.D.H. Cole. Miami: BN Publishing, 2007. In In Dialogue with Humanity: Textbook for General Education Foundation Programme. 2nd ed. Hong Kong: Office of University General Education, The Chinese University of Hong Kong, 2012. 383-421.

Several classics of our syllabus, however, have established conventions for academic citations and require you to give the relevant book number, chapter number, or line number. It is advisable that you master the citation style unique to each of these classics, and the list of sample citations below will help. Below, two examples are provided for each of the twelve classics in the syllabus to show you how to document indirect and direct quotations properly.

1. The Odyssey

State the book number and line number(s) when making a quotation from The Odyssey. For instance, in e.g.(1) below, 23:184-186 means Book 23, Lines 184-186. In e.g.(2), the original line begins with a personal pronoun "she." To help your reader see that it is Calypso that is referred to in the quoted line, you may insert Calypso's name by using a pair of square brackets.

E.g.(1) Penelope tests her husband by telling her maid to bring the marital bed out from the bedroom (23:184-186)

E.g.(2) Odysseus makes his first appearance as a worn-out man: "She [Calypso] found him sitting where the breakers rolled in. His eyes were perpetually wet with tears now, His life draining away in homesickness (5:150-152)."

2. Symposium

State the line number when making a quotation from the Symposium, following the Stephanus Numbers (e.g., 215b-c, 223d, as appear below). Such references are given in the margins of most published books of Platonic dialogues.

E.g.(1) Alcibiades praises Socrates with similes, comparing him to such mythical figures as Silenus and Marsyas (215b-c).

E.g.(2) The Symposium ends with Socrates leaving the party in sobriety: "He went to the Lyceum, had a bath, spent the rest of the day as he normally would, and then, towards evening, went home to bed" (223d).

3. The Nicomachean Ethics

State the line number when making a quotation from The Nicomachean Ethics, following the Bekker Numbers (e.g., 1157b8-14). You will find such references in the margins of most published books of Aristotle's works).

E.g.(1) Aristotle mentions that friendship will fade out after long separation (VIII 5, 1157b8-14). [i.e., Book 8, Chapter 5, Lines 8-14 of 1157b].

E.g.(2) Aristotle emphasizes the importance of "living together": "those who approve of each other but do not spend all their time together seem to be well disposed rather than friendly, because nothing is so characteristic of friends as spending time together (VIII 5, 1157b20 f.)." ["VIII 5, 1157b20 f." means Book 8, Chapter 5, Line 20 forward of 1157b20.]

4. 《論語》The Analects

徵引《論語》原文，請標明引文出自哪一個篇章。《論語》各篇章均已統一編號，例一所引之章句，標準編號為 13.18，表示章句出於《論語》第十三篇十八節。例二之 7.22，表示章句出於《論語》第七篇二十二節。

State the book and verse number when making a quotation from The Analects. All books and verses in The Analects have a reference number though slight variation may be found in different editions and translations. For example, there are slight differences in the designation of book and verse numbers between Yang Bojun's edition (used in our textbook) and Burton Watson's translation (used in our English course pack). In example (1), below, the reference number of the quotation is 13:18, which means Book 13, Verse 18 of The Analects.

例（1）孔子認爲兒子隱瞞父親的過犯是直率的表現(13.18)。

E.g.(1) Confucius thinks that covering up the crimes of one's father was an act of honesty (13:18).

例（2）孔子主張學習朋友的優點，看到朋友的缺點，則反省自己，加以改正：「子曰：『三人行，必有我師焉：擇其善者而從之，其不善者而改之。』」(7.22)

E.g. (2) Confucius suggests that we should learn from our friends' strengths and take their weaknesses as motivations for self-examination: "The Master said, When I walk with two others, I'm bound to find my teacher there. I single out their good points and pursue them, note their bad points and make my corrections." (7:21)

5. 《莊子》Chuang Tzu

徵引《莊子》原文時，請標明引文所出之篇名及課本頁數。《莊子》各篇章並未有統一編號，可按傳統之徵引規格，書明所出之篇名（如《莊子・逍遙遊》）。為方便讀者在原文查閱所引章句，可同時書明引所出之課本頁數。

State the chapter title, book title, and page number in the English course pack (taken from Victor Mair's translation in Wandering on the Way: Early Taoist Tales and Parables of Chuang Tzu) when making a quotation from Chuang Tzu (or Zhuangzi).

例（1）莊子以樗樹不符合繩墨，枝幹彎曲，反而免於砍伐，說明無用之用的道理（《莊子・逍遙遊》，頁 213）。

E.g. (1) Chuang Tzu explains the use of uselessness with the example of the Stinky Quassia, which, he observes, escapes the misery of being chopped down because its truck is gnarled and knotted and cannot be measured by an inked line ("Carefree Wandering", Chuang Tzu, 4).

例（2）莊子認爲人與其「相濡以沫，不如相忘於江湖」(《莊子・大宗師》，頁 228)。

E.g. (2) Chuang Tzu thinks that instead of "blowing moisture on each other and keeping each other wet with their slime," two fish may be happier forgetting themselves in the rivers and lakes ("The Great Ancestral Teacher", Chuang Tzu, 17).

6. 《般若之心》The Heart of Understanding

徵引《般若之心》內容時，請標明課本頁數。

State the page number of the quotation in the English course pack.

例（1）一行禪師運用比喻說明「互即互入」的道理，例如從一張紙可以看出背後存在的雲、雨、樹木，甚至陽光、伐木工人、小麥、伐木工人的父母、我們的心等一切事物（頁 243-244）。

E.g. (1) Thich Naht Hanh uses many analogies to explain the idea of "inter-being." For example, he says that in a piece of paper we can see the clouds, the rain, the trees, and even the sunshine, the logger, the wheat, the logger's parents and our own mind (2).

例（2）一行禪師指出，「在佛教中，知識被認爲是般若的障礙」（頁 245）。

E.g. (2) Thich Naht Hanh says that "[i]n Buddhism knowledge is regarded as an obstacle for understanding" (3).

7. 《聖經》The Bible

徵引《聖經》章句，請標明章句所出之篇名及章節編號。

State the chapter and verse number when making a quotation from The Bible.

例（1）《聖經》把女性懷孕的痛苦解釋為上帝的懲罰（〈創世記〉3:16）[即〈創世記〉三章十六節]。

E.g. (1) The Bible interprets the maternal pain of female as God's punishment (Genesis 3.16) [i.e. Genesis, Chapter 3, Verse 16].

例（2）耶穌說：「誰遵行神的旨意，誰就是我的兄弟、姊妹和母親了」(〈馬可福音〉3:35）[即〈馬可福音〉三章三十五節]，反映他的倫理觀與一般人不同。

E.g. (2) Jesus says, "Whoever does the will of God is my brother and sister and mother" (Mark 3.35) [i.e. Gospel according to Mark, Chapter 3, Verse 35] reflecting that regards family values differently from the ordinary people.

8. Qur'an

State the chapter/sura number and line number when making a quotation from the Qur'an.

E.g.(1) "O People! Worship your Lord who created you as well as those who came before you. Perhaps you will fear Him. (2:21)[i.e., Sura 2, Line 21]" In this verse, "people" refers to the people of Israel.

E.g.(2) The Qur'an provides detailed guidelines for divorce (2:226-232, 236-237, 241-242) [Sura 2, Lines 226-232, 236-237 and 241-242].

9. 《明夷待訪錄》Waiting for the Dawn: A Plan for the Prince

徵引《明夷待訪錄》原文時，請標明引文所出之篇名。

State the chapter title when making a quotation from Waiting for the Dawn: A Plan for the Prince.

例（1）黃宗羲期望賢君採用他的治國方針，如同箕子獲明君探訪。(《題辭》)

E.g. (1) Huang Tsung-hsi hopes that a good ruler will adopt his proposal of governance, just as Chi Tzu being visited ("Preface of Huang Tsung-hsi").

例（2）黃宗羲以拉木頭比喻君臣治理天下：「夫治天下猶曳大木然，前者唱邪，後者唱許。君與臣，共曳木之人也；若手不執紼，足不履地，曳木者唯娛笑于曳木者之前，從曳木者以為良，而曳木之職荒矣。」(《原臣》) 他指出臣子若只顧取悅、娛樂君主，就荒廢了治理天下的職責。

E.g. (2) Huang Tsung-hsi uses hauling great logs as a simile of governance by the prince and his ministers:

> For governing the world is like the hauling of great logs. The men in front call out "Heave!," those behind, "Ho!" The prince and his ministers should be log-haulers working together. If some, instead of holding tightly to the ropes with feet firmly set on the ground, amuse themselves by cavorting around in front, the others behind will think it the thing to do and the business of hauling logs will be neglected. ("On Ministership")

He points out that if the ministers only concern themselves with pleasing and entertaining the ruler, the duty of governing the world will be neglected.

10. The Social Contract

State the book number, chapter number, and page number when making a quotation.

E.g.(1) According to Rousseau, family is the first model of political societies (Book I, Chapter II, p.385).

E.g.(2) Rousseau begins The Social Contract by claiming that "[m]an is born free; and everywhere he is in chains" (Book I, Chapter I, p.384). What kind of "chains" does he have in mind? This is what we aim to explore in this essay.

11. The Wealth of Nations

State the book number, chapter number, and page number when making a quotation.

E.g.(1) Adam Smith uses the production of pins as an example to illustrate the benefits of division of labour (Book I, Chapter I, p.426).

E.g.(2) Adam Smith expresses his view on human nature in The Wealth of Nations. He thinks that all human beings have "the propensity to truck, barter, and exchange one thing for another" (Book I, Chapter II, p.431).

12. "Wages of Labour" and "Alienated Labour"

State the chapter title and page number of the quotation in the textbook. The essay title can be embedded in your sentence or in the parenthetical note.

E.g.(1) Unlike Adam Smith, Karl Marx draws attention to the negative impact of division of labour, arguing that it leads workers to compete with each other and with the machines ("Wages of Labour," p.463).

E.g.(2) In the essay "Alienated Labour," Marx examines the relation between man's "species-being" and nature by first defining the "genuine human functions" (p.468).